I think that I have decided to be offended by being referred to as a Caucasian (these thoughts precipitated by the news that a few sports announcers will cease referring to the Washington football team by their chosen name).

I am Bohemian. On occasion, I can and will accept being referred to as Czech. Caucasian, however, refers to a group of mountains many miles and many countries to the east of my ancestral land. I do not associate with the people who live between the Black sea and the Caspian sea (which is where the mountains are) and I see no reason for my government or my EEOC officer to stereotype me within that group.

I stand offended.

Now - for CLARITY - this post is entirely tongue in cheek. I had to say that because my mom (full on Irish) will be ticked that I didn't pick to be Irish instead of Czech. Neither Irish or Czech is Caucasian.
